Nice review but after upgrading to LR5.2 RC I think performance is better than with LR4. Working on a project with 1500 D800 NEFs my impression is that the smart previews increase speed while working in the Developer mode - in Lib. mode however everything slows because the JPEG previews are used. So far I am not sure how the Jpegs are used as previews when you have the smart previews (DNGs) available. But have to say that I am happy with 5.2 RC although I will say bye-bye to LR the day they make it part of CC.

Regards! Sren Thank you for your interest in how we handle DNG files in Lightroom. Your question comes up for many new customers as the program becomes more mature as experienced Lightroom users work with a broader range of formats. It is a complicated issue, and we've experienced a lot of issues with the handling of DNG files with older revisions. As to whether it is wise to feature the new Version 5.2 as an update for the more experienced users, it is certainly true that this update will take off the seat belt, and may lead to an accident. Our philosophy has long been that a new version of Lightroom usually entails broader feature support and performance improvements. The fact that only DNG files are supported in that version, and the limitation of the DNG format means some customers may not find a compelling reason to upgrade at that time, which is why that version is in beta. The DNG format has proven to be an interesting format, but we never expected it to survive without changes. Over the past several years we've made changes to the DNG file format to address many of the problems we've encountered.
